les Oreilles Bleues

An international band with international ambitions, les Oreilles Bleues is the result of an encounter between a Swiss, a Russian and a German who only had three things in common: a passion for music, a sense of adventure and... well, actually, that was it.

It didn't take much time for the three musicians to find some common grounds though. Songs started as singer-songwriter style recordings with vocals and guitar, ready for the small stage of a cozy coffee shop. These songs were then put on fire under energetic drums and a fuzzy bass, until what came out was a solid collaborative composition. A demo recording happened a few months into the existence of the band, and they are now looking for a stage to share their energetic pop-rock songs.

There's of course a story behind the name. The name came from a linguistic mistake, when a friend told her french-speaking grandfather that her newborn daughter had blue ears – elle a les oreilles bleues.

Music, videos and more can be found on the band's website.
