

SonicWhiteOut

Shoegaze meets Wave & Electropop

The German duo is the result of a chance meeting by two individuals with very different musical roots who found they both had a deep affection for the new wave sounds of the 1980s. The SonicWhiteOut studio project evolved into a live band as the guys experimented with exotic sounds from vintage Russian synths, e-bowed guitars and broken studio-effects. The goal was to combine vintage and modern into one all encompassing sound, which felt like ..home.. SonicWhiteOut is the constant, restless and never-ending search for tunes and words, surging to describe our intimate sentiments between fortune and fear, anger and madness, when ..again and again.. The outer and inner worlds collide .

Others say we defy genre definitions and style limitations, truly refusing to get stuck in a box. Singles such as Wheel Of Sound are a great example of how SonicWhiteOut can keep things simple and direct, yet fuel their music with eclectic and innovative ideas - The right balance between experimentalism and catchy appeal, not unlike artists such as The NoTivist or Nine Inch Nails, but with a definitively brighter and more open and uplifting feel. If I were to make a comparison, I'd say that this act falls somewhere in between The Postal Service and The Smiths. If you like electro-indiepop, you just can't go wrong

SonicWhiteOut released their debut EP Crust and got pretty positive feedback from a couple of Indie Music Blogs and music lovers over Germany. The EP can be found with the usual suspects like Spotify, Deezer, AppleMusic etc

The first song of the upcoming CD Bound&Space got airplay from some local radio stations like WDR2 and a lot of attention in the web. With Dirk Riegner, SonicWhiteOut now found the ideal producer, who is able to perfectly polish the new songs and get them ready for everything exciting which might come during the next months

We love recording and working on the songs in the studio but the real action happens on stage. So we are always looking for cool gig-opportunities. If you plan a special event and want to see us on your stage drop us a note under swo@mail.de or check our facebook page

SonicWhiteOut

Shoegaze meets Wave & Electropop
Some say in-between Nine Inch Nails and David Bowie

Others say:

... Right away the sound brings listeners to some familiar sounds of the eighties. The songs have a unique sound that is dark and interesting. I happen to enjoy sounds like this, which remind me a bit of David Bowie and a hint of Depeche Mode....

... The slow beat draws you in to haunting vocals. Any fan of new wave bands from the 80s would love this. The sound draws me back to time of dark clubs filled with angst ridden youth ...

... The sound they've created is something unique blending electronic synths and drums with an indie-rock vibe. The musical stylings in this album flow perfectly with the high production value that clearly shines throughout....