EXC

excolorado is the name under which the Argentinian musician and producer José María D'Agostino, better known as Peta, releases his first solo project after having been an important protagonist of the Argentine independent music of the last decades, either with his band Go-Neko! or through his studio Moloko.

Go-Neko! was one of the pioneers of the national indie-Krautrock scene. The band released two albums with the local label Laptra: "Una Especie de Mutante" (2008) and "Los Malos de Verdad" (2010) and played in the most important Buenos Aires venues and also toured Spain, where they played at the Primavera Sound Festival in 2013.

Under his production, some of the most important albums of the Argentine Indie genre were recorded at his studio Moloko, such as "Creo que te amo" by 107 Faunos and the debuts albums of Bestia Bebé and Las Ligas Menores. He worked with some of the emblematic figures such as El Mató a un Policía Motorizado and Rosario Bléfari.

excolorado's debut was in 2017 with the album "Siete Mares", where Peta was in charge of recording and playing all the instruments. In it, he takes us on a journey building songs through repetitive sounds and layers of melodies going from the pulse of Krautrock to the most contemplative dream pop.

In 2018, he released the single "La fiesta de los que alardean", where he consolidated his sound supported by new musicians. In 2019 he released a new single called "Dreamykraut!". The title of the single is a term he coined as a denomination of his own musical ethos, reaffirming his love for vintage sounds and textures.

His upcoming album "Lo Bueno del Tiempo y las Decisiones" was recorded early in 2020 and mixed during the pandemic.

It is planned to be released this year, starting with three singles accompanied by a video clip each.
