

THURSDAY CULT

Thursday Cult, that's the sound of a generation that is looking for a way back to handmade music. Without any bric-a-brac, only analogue instruments and pure energy. The four young friends sound whirrs somewhere between Garage, Classic Rock and Blues. What's clearly recognizable is the influence of 70s rock bands, which almost takes the listeners back to the decade of rock-pioneers such as Deep Purple, Genesis and Pink Floyd. But not entirely! In Thursday Cults music, you can also find sporadic influences from modern rock music. And besides, the sophisticated production wouldn't be possible 50 years ago. Also, if you're honest, what rock band had a female singer back in these days? Thursday Cults frontwoman Fitore has such a strong and powerful voice that many male singers of the past decades would be outshined now.

Thursday Cult create an honest and raw sound in a world which is shaped by hypocrisy and masquerades. They are only themselves and show what they really are at stage: great musicians who don't need any laminations or ostentatious shows to convince the audience.
