

Biography

Tropica are the five psychedelic- musketeers from Germany. In love with the sound of their musical idols from the past decades, Tropica fuse the cosmos of 70' experimental music with the beauty of variety in their songwriting, playfully applying it to the structures of modern pop music.

In 2015, at a regular students house party, a song by the Australian neo-psych band POND brought together Fabian Kresin and Dino Mujcinovic on the dancefloor, making them realize their love for the same music. Fabian demanded Dino to meet his brother Tobias Kresin at their rehearsal room next week. The three continued writing and recording ideas for the next year. The sessions became rare as their rehearsal room was turned into an erotic- massage studio soon, bringing the need for a new room. During that time, Fabian left for a long journey to Australia, while Dino and Tobi kept searching for musicians to form a project.

The search came to an end as the Drummer, Sascha Kern, found a new rehearsal room in an old WWII bunker and invited his fellow musicians to join him to fulfil the desire of playing live music again. Wednesdays were turned into a day for jamming with several friends and musicians, everybody was welcome.

On New Year's Eve, Patrick Heidbuechel joined the regular jams on the keys. The four recorded a couple of demos, sending them to Fabian in Australia. He reacted by cancelling the last months of his trip and surprised the others by suddenly showing up to next weeks session.

Out of that gathering, realizing their like- mindedness, the five-heads decided to form the Band Tropica. Everyone had already collected stage-experience and found their love for playing live through various Projects and Bands. Still, it became clear, that this Formation is something new and exciting for each one. Padde and Sash finally completed the lack the Band felt a need for to take their music to another level. After months of heavy jamming, the five headed formation turned their jams into new songs and rearranged old ideas. Surprised by how well the creative process took it's course, things started to get more serious. Tropica soon started playing live shows, moved into a bigger rehearsal room and built a recording studio.

The following months, the self-produced EP "On a Rainbow" was recorded and will be released on September 7th 2019.